Caravan
The Student-produced Newspaper of the American University in Cairo

Volume 86, Issue 17
caravan.aucegypt.edu

Sunday, March 5, 2006

Student Council tries to fill vacancies

By Rehaam Rosaero

Caravan Reporter

Due to the shortened fall 2005 semester, the majority of the American University in Cairo’s (AUC) Student Council elections were delayed, leaving a total of 32 vacancies in the council and forcing the Student Judicial Board (SJB) to hold elections this semester, according to the chairman of the SJB Mohamed El-Tawfiq.

“According to the constitution, the Student Council is supposed to be active at the beginning of the spring semester,” said El-Tawfiq, adding that time constraints prevented the majority of students from running last semester.

The Student Council consists of representatives from each major who are elected prior to the end of the fall semester, but because of the unprecedented shortening of last fall, elections were held in only two majors, mechanical engineering and construction engineering.

“The remaining seats should have been filled by the Student Union (SU) president and vice president, but they didn’t provide a list,” said Louai El Sabi, chairman of the Student Council. Currently there are only 13 representatives on the council.

For every 180 students in each major, there is one student representing them in the Student Council. Of the 32 missing seats in the council, 20 majors are not represented, including four vacancies for the journalism and mass communication department, two for political science and two for economics.

While the deadline for candidate application is tomorrow, discussions are still continuing about a date for the elections according to El-Tawfiq.

“Meetings are being held as usual,” said El Sabi, “but the vacancies are being held pending the fact that the general assembly is not well-represented.”

Mostafa Monos, the construction engineering representative, confirms the hindrance in performance. “Because of the vacancies, I’m covering more departments than my duty [requires],” he said.

According to the department of Institutional Planning, Research, Assessment and Testing, the mass communication, political science and economics majors are three of the largest in AUC. There were 440 students majoring in mass communication, 222 in political science, and 191 in economics during the fall 2005 semester alone.

“By not having representatives in the mass communication department, a huge number of the AUC population is being ignored,” said Marian Rizkalla, a mass communication student and construction engineering senior, who would have wanted to be a representative but “had no idea they were even holding elections.”

“Events are always well-attended, but important things like elections aren’t,” said Rizkalla.

But there were a “few significant accomplishments” that were used to publicize the elections, said El Sabi.

See COUNCIL, 2

Al Jazeera launches English channel

By Raya Shokafard

Caravan Editor

Al Jazeera has no plans to counter repeated attacks by the Bush administration about its allegedly biased newsgathering and reporting, according to John Baylis, the executive program producer of Al Jazeera International (AJI).

The remarks were made during Baylis’s visit to the Adham Center for Electronic Journalism at the American University in Cairo (AUC) on Feb. 23.

“We are achieving all the things that we are set out to do there is nothing else we have to do to counter opinions or perceptions,” said Baylis.

Al Jazeera is an Arabic satellite news channel headquartered in Doha, Qatar and financed by the Qatar emir family since 1996. Al Jazeera’s newest operation, AJI, is a new English language channel which will start airing on satellite in May, but will not be a translation of the Arabic channel.

Similar to the Arabic Al Jazeera channel, AJI will present views from as many angles as possible and from different parts of the world.

See ZEJREZA, 2

Play to become movie

By Shahrazad Elfar

Feature Reporter

Mass communication professor, art professor and first-time playwright Shems Friedlander plans to turn his one-act play, “Dream was a thing,” into a film following its two-night run at the American University in Cairo’s Howard Theater.

The 25-minute play was sponsored by the university’s Performance and Visual Arts department and premiered on Feb. 27.

“Love is the only illness more manageable than health,” begins Yara Gobrani, an AUC alumna and the only actress in the play. Gobrani explains that the story is about love, for a man, for one’s self and for God.

Almost 70 people attended the play, including faculty, students, and AJI president David Amro.

“I relate to [this woman] as a person on all levels,” said Rizkalla. “She herself was the one that I would have wanted to be a representative but had no idea they were even holding elections.”

“Events are always well-attended, but important things like elections aren’t,” said Rizkalla.

But there were a “few significant accomplishments” that were used to publicize the elections, said El Sabi.

See COUNCIL, 2

Al Jazeera launches English channel

By Raya Shokafard

Caravan Editor

Al Jazeera has no plans to counter repeated attacks by the Bush administration about its allegedly biased newsgathering and reporting, according to John Baylis, the executive program producer of Al Jazeera International (AJI). The remarks were made during Baylis’s visit to the Adham Center for Electronic Journalism at the American University in Cairo (AUC) on Feb. 23.

“We are achieving all the things that we are set out to do there is nothing else we have to do to counter opinions or perceptions,” said Baylis. Al Jazeera is an Arabic satellite news channel headquartered in Doha, Qatar and financed by the Qatar emir family since 1996. Al Jazeera’s newest operation, AJI, is a new English language channel which will start airing on satellite in May, but will not be a translation of the Arabic channel. Similar to the Arabic Al Jazeera channel, AJI will present views from as many angles as possible and from different parts of the world. See ZEJREZA, 2

Play to become movie

By Shahrazad Elfar

Feature Reporter

Mass communication professor, art professor and first-time playwright Shems Friedlander plans to turn his one-act play, “Dream was a thing,” into a film following its two-night run at the American University in Cairo’s Howard Theater. The 25-minute play was sponsored by the university’s Performance and Visual Arts department and premiered on Feb. 27. “Love is the only illness more manageable than health,” begins Yara Gobrani, an AUC alumna and the only actress in the play. Gobrani explains that the story is about love, for a man, for one’s self and for God. Almost 70 people attended the play, including faculty, students, and AJI president David Amro. “I relate to [this woman] as a person on all levels,” said Rizkalla. “She herself was the one that I would have wanted to be a representative but had no idea they were even holding elections.” Events are always well-attended, but important things like elections aren’t,” said Rizkalla. But there were a “few significant accomplishments” that were used to publicize the elections, said El Sabi. See COUNCIL, 2

AUC to open new majors

By Cheereen Zakri

Caravan Reporter

The school of sciences and engineering is proposing a new architecture major in March, along with five other engineering programs, for consideration by the American University in Cairo’s administration, according to Nagwa Sherif, a construction engineering professor.

When the proposal is to be offered and the types of courses it will include are still to be determined and depend on administration approval, but the new programs will most likely be offered when the university moves to its new campus, said Sherif.

The other programs include petroleum engineering, environmental engineering, computer engineering, biotechnical engineering and mechatronics engineering, which is a combination of both mechanical and electronic engineering.

“The program is prepared to provide a unique kind of information, different from other programs in Egypt,” said Sherif. “It will be internationally accredited in both the U.S. and Egypt.”

“I wish that these new programs [had been] available before to allow me to pick from a variety instead of the three engineering programs offered now,” said Aly Shaban, a construction engineering student.

The program will focus on design aspects, trends, theories, and the latest presentation techniques using computer-aided design. It will also concentrate on the architectural side of construction.

Shahien wanted to study architecture but since it is not offered at AUC, he had to choose construction because it is the "closest thing to [architecture]."

"Architecture is already offered as a minor, and many students say it is about time that it is offered," said Raad Bajocci, a business administration senior.

See ARCHITECTURE, 2

Career Mart provides advice to students

By Nahiye El Sayed

Caravan Reporter

The Career Mart held last Monday on the main campus at the American University in Cairo, hosted professionals from the fields of marketing, finance, tourism, investment and journalism.

“We attempt to open students’ options so that they don’t graduate with only one idea [one career option] before them,” said Dalia Awad, the advisor of the Career and Advising Placement Services (CAPS).

Career Mart is organized every year by the CAPS office to provide AUC students a chance to meet with professionals from their fields of interest and ask them questions about the field.

Awaad said that they offer students the chance to meet with "what professionals whom they normally would not have a chance to meet. Students can ask about career paths, courses, choices of major, job and internship opportunities or simply about the job market itself.

"I wanted to know about my career options," said HasnaaGemey, a business administration senior.

Other students had enquiries about internships or job opportunities. Khadija Sphahi, a psychology senior, said, “The lady I talked to was working in the research center I wanted to tutor at so she gave me an idea about it and she might help me get a job there.”

Miette Mabrouk, publisher of the Daily Star Egypt, students usually have questions about what they want to do, how to do it and where to go. “It is best to know from a professional what is in demand now,” said Mabrouk, who was attending her second Career Mart.

Mabrouk explained that the problem with education is that it does not always provide what the current market needs so it is useful to talk to professionals. She also added that she might help students with job opportunities or internships if there is an opening.

Other professionals were there for consultation only. Ahmad Mabrouk, a marketing consultant, said that because he is a consultant, he is not in a position to offer students jobs. He criteria here to tell them all they need to know about courses to take, how to choose their major and their career advancement.

“It depends really on each student and what he wants to ask but we provide them with real exposure,” said Khaled.

Sherihan Armo, an electronics engineering senior, thought that last year’s Career Mart was better. “The electronics) company that came last year in its career administration was more interesting,” said Armo.

See CAREER MART, 2

Hundreds of poultry shop owners gathered last Sunday to protest against the government for closing down their shops after cases of bird flu were found in Egypt.

See CAMPUS, 2
On The Wire

Do you know about the suicide bombers who attacked a Saudi Arabian oil facility?

BY NADEEM EL SAWY
Caravan Reporter

Wellness Awareness Week, which was held last week on the Main campus at the American University in Cairo, highlighted the various services offered by the Student Counseling Center and tried to increase self-awareness among students.

The Wellness Awareness Week “is to promote workshops and, more importantly, services provided by the Student Counseling Center,” said Aly Mokhtar, the counseling center manager.

The event is organized by the Student Counseling Center and the Human Resources department in cooperation with many other departments, and includes workshops as well as tournaments for students, faculty and staff.

According to Mokhtar, quizzes were offered in the booths set up on the Main campus so students could find out what their problems are and analyze their feelings, and to break the ice between the students and the counselors.

Workshops discussed issues such as how to handle difficult situations, self-management, how to deal with stress and communication skills.

The program initially offered many career workshops at the university for students who do not have the time for it, they offer a shorter version during assembly hours.

“Wellness [refers to] an emotional, mental and physical state,” said Mokhtar. “The workshops are meant to teach students how to maintain control of their lives and the skills needed to solve problems.”

Al Shafei emphasized that, “Although there are different services and programs related to the counseling center, the main effort is on promoting counseling and psychological awareness to students.”

The event was organized by the Student Counseling Center.

Counseling center promotes workshops and services

career Mart continued from 1

Some students were disappointed not to find the booth for the Language Centre.

“Other students, such as Alaa Zakaria, an anthropologist senior, said that she felt indifferent toward the lack of representation of her major in the council. "Anthropology as a department is self-sufficient," she said. "I don't even know what the Student Council does.”

However, Mosaa suggests that students are partly to blame for this neglect, "there are many students who are not involved. They have a duty to find out about the council," he added.

Architecture continued from 1

One of the booths, "YB," a health awareness booth, organized by the Student Counseling center.

"The workshops [provide] an approach Leo Burnett, a leading advertising agency with a strong interest in education, said Abdel Khair.

Amgad Sabry, the managing director of Leo Burnett, said that the mission of ICGE is compatible with that of Leo Burnett: “This is why we felt that this format is an excellent opportunity to invest in our youth, especially those in the two advertising councils, by educating them about our young industries.”

With the assistance of Leo Burnett, delegates got a glimpse of the advertising profession, said Sandra Rashid, a CSM-secretariat.

Abdel Khair said that Leo Burnett provided the secretariat of each council with academic materials for the background papers and preparatory sessions.

"It is imperative that corporations take an active part in the education and preparation of our youth for the challenges of the business world that awaits them,” said Sabry.

AJCians teach English to underprivileged

BY CHEEREN ZAKI

Alasheen Ya Rabady (AYB), a community service club at the American University in Cairo (AUC) has organized its annual lan- guage development program to teach English in Old Cairo. The program includes teachers from both AUC and Cairo University. “We have been teaching at AUC and another four from Cairo University,” said Rabady.

"People are really benefiting from this program, and we hope to improve their career opportunities," he added.

The program was launched in the neighbourhood of Ein El Seera, which hosts six other AYB development programs, including English classes, computer learning, community service, vocational training, micro-projects and a youth development program, which focuses on integrating development children for a year.

The language development program, which began in the summer of 2006, has courses of five levels of difficulty that are given twice a week in the Ein El Seera Youth Club.

According to Ahmed Hassan, the head of the language development program, there are a maximum of 12 students in each class and their ages range from 19 to 40. “The students are mostly university graduates in their late 20’s,” said Hassan, “but we [also] have people in their forties.”

Residents of Ein El Seera are not the only people who can apply, but the candidates are required to take a placement test to determine their current English level as well as their aptitude and exam at the end of the course.

Nour El-Akkad, a business administration senior, teaches a five-course one-in course in the program that introduces basic grammar rules and simple vocabulary to encourage the students to engage in conversation.

“I just gave them their final and not one person failed. It was better than I expected” she said.

Marya Mahmoud, a lawyer in Ein El Seera and a student in the program, said that not only did she benefit from the program, but she also enjoyed the motivating atmosphere.

Ehab El Shafei, a student of El- Akkad’s level-one, expressed his appreciation for AYB and their efforts. “We didn’t want to pass the course,” he said, “but we wanted to please Noor.”

Ahmed Younis, another level-one student, said he “benefited a lot from the program. El Akkad was not just teaching us the English language, but an inspiration to improve their language skills.”

Launched in 2004, the program is still going strong.

Jazeera to start broadcasting in May

continued from 1

world, so viewers can make their own judgments.

“In some places, people don’t like that,” said Bayliss. “They have a very rigid idea about their world, the way their country is, their society is, and to have that kind of discussion makes people uncomfortable. People don’t like that.”

“If they are narrow-minded people, they want to see what they want to see and hear what they want to hear. There is absolutely nothing I can do. I will be regretful about that, but at least I am giving other people the opportunity to make a judgment over time on different events,” said Bayliss.

Currently, Al Jazeera has four production centers: Washington, London, and Kuala Lumpur with the largest office in Doha, its headquarters. Each center produces its own programs, but the majority of them are produced by Al Jazeera staff and freelance producers in the field, in order to add richness and variety for the viewers.

For example, some programs like “Every Woman” are edited in Doha, but reporting comes from other locations to make awareness of the richness of culture and diversity to give greater numbers of women voice.

Bayliss could not comment about other Al Jazeera programs because details have not been publically released. He did say however, that AJI will feature some important figures in the news, particularly released. He did say however, that AJI will feature some important figures in the news, particularly Big Five, said Bayliss. “They have that kind of discussion makes people uncomfortable. People don’t like that.”

“If they are narrow-minded people, they want to see what they want to see and hear what they want to hear. There is absolutely nothing I can do. I will be regretful about that, but at least I am giving other people the opportunity to make a judgment over time on different events,” said Bayliss.

Currently, Al Jazeera has four production centers: Washington, London, and Kuala Lumpur with the largest office in Doha, its headquarters. Each center produces its own programs, but the majority of them are produced by Al Jazeera staff and freelance producers in the field, in order to add richness and variety for the viewers.

For example, some programs like “Every Woman” are edited in Doha, but reporting comes from other locations to make awareness of the richness of culture and diversity to give greater numbers of women voice.

Bayliss could not comment about other Al Jazeera programs because details have not been publically released. He did say however, that AJI will feature some important figures in the news, particularly released. He did say however, that AJI will feature some important figures in the news, particularly Amin represents Rotaract

By Mohamed Imam

Caravan Reporter

Amin, 22-year-old electronics engineering senior, was selected as last year’s Rotary Scholar Ambassador to travel and study at Concordia University in Montreal, Canada. An experience, he says, that he “gave me a wider view of how life is going to be when I graduate.” That experience, not necessarily in Canada, however. Amin admires his hosts for their punctuality and practicality but not for their weather. “It was freezing,” he said. “It’s always snowing and there is almost no sun.”

Rotary divides the world into districts and ambassadors are selected as the ambassador of goodwill from district 2450, which includes countries: Egypt, Lebanon, Cyprus, Bahrain, Georgia, Armenia, Jordan, Sudan and the UAE.

The ambassador program consists of two main objectives. The first is to gain the experience of studying abroad and be exposed to new teaching techniques. The second objective is to decrease cultural differences and promote the concept of world peace. “This can be done through participation in many conferences and giving presentations in Rotary clubs and universities abroad,” said Amin.

Amin has made more than 14 presentations in Rotary clubs on selected social and political issues. He played a big role in persuading the image of these topics he represented to Canadians and others he met, who had asked him if he had his own camel.

He added that he encouraged most of the people he met to visit Egypt and experience the Egyptian culture. “I’m still in contact with many of them,” he said.

Amin claims he learned a lot about the experience, including time management skills, and how to handle debates and accept different cultures.

He advises people who are considering traveling to be open-minded and to never forget that they are the guests in another country, so they shouldn’t criticize the way people live. “I recommend everyone who gets the chance to travel and study abroad when he is an undergraduate to go for it,” said Amin.

electric atmosphere at Retro

By Farida Helmy

Caravan Reporter

Push open the big wooden door and walk into a haven of candle-lit seating, chill-out music, friendly service and good food. Welcome to Retro, a café and restaurant in Mohandiseen.

Retro presents a cozy atmosphere offering an array of food and drink. This hotspot serves a variety of pasta, sandwiches, soup, desserts, smoothies and coffee (including decaffeinated). Famous for its creative breakfasts and memorizable beverages, Retro is a place that appeals to many kinds of people.

The dark wooden furniture and soothing colored cushions set a relaxed atmosphere with oldies and chill-out music playing in the background. Tables look out onto the street through pulled-up, French-designed curtains. High tables and sofas fill up the rest of the area. The walls are decorated with modern artwork that further contributes to the laid-back atmosphere.

“Retro was my hangout all last year. It’s like a home away from home. They also had people playing violins and harps there a week. I loved it,” said Dina Naguib, an business administration senior.

Menus are designed like newspapers with advertisements on the last page. The ashtrays and salt and pepper shakers are metallic pieces of art that add presence and depth to the tables. “The menus are very interesting and creative. It’s a new idea for menus,” said Samira Gebriel, a mass communication junior.

Retro allows indoor smoking so that people can work on laptops and study individually or in groups without having to go outside to smoke. The magazine stand offers magazines that don’t contain the stereotypical Fashion and Flap. It has different newspapers and political and social magazines such as Egypt Today, Newsweek and Insight.

Fabulous Retro offers in customers a place to work out, but most importantly it’s chill. The staff is quick and efficient as well as friendly. “They are very loyal to their customers and they customize their services to those customers,” said Fady Hebeish, a mass communication senior.

“I really like the atmosphere, the food and the service. [But] the place needs to be a little bit bigger,” said Laila Arafah, a political science junior.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.

Evil prevails at the cinema

By Karim Helqzy

Caravan Reporter

The elaborate opening sequence of “Lord of War” involves a sweep shot across an army of armed bullets, pulling up to our protagonist, a side-dud Usr Oro (Nicola Czop), a smoking a cigar and kick-starting the viewer remains lightweight in arms dealing in a seedy motel.

From his first humorous experiences to his later involvement in a combatant. “I was really needed to be, as it would detract from the story,” said mechanical engineering senior Ahmed Ismael.

Rashid added that both professors and students pay the same amount of money for parking their cars, which is LE 140 per month. The amount sometimes reaches LE 150 after tips, he said.

Another says in front of the Social Science building, Reida Abdelfattah, said that police officers make it difficult for him to do his job because they often refuse to let him park cars. Abdelfattah added that his parking prices range from LE 2 to LE 3 per day.

On the other hand, mechanical engineering senior, Mohamed Rafiq, said he does not face the parking problem at all. Rafiq lives in Garden City and used to get to the university walking. But this semester he bought a bicycle as his means of transportation.

“It is really funny to see people being in an emergency problem when I do not,” said Rafiq.

Professors face the same problem. Mass communication professor Naimy Handa said she used to drive to university until she hired a driver after realizing the money she spent on parking and fixing her car was equal to the salary of a driver.

“The car attendants are taking advantage of us as they know that we really need them,” said sociologist professor Madia El Saffy.

Parking difficulties frustrate AUCians

By Mohamed El Fawly

Caravan Reporter

May El Badrawy, a mass communication junior, faces the same problem. She usually waits 20 minutes for someone to park her car, which ultimately makes her late for her classes.

In addition, since El Badrawy started using the sayes, her parking fines reach approximately LE 2,000 per year for illegal parking.

But Mohdsher Rashid, one of the parking attendants on Youssif El Guindi Street, said, “I, as a parking attendant, try as hard as I can to not harm the students’ cars or even let police officers write parking fines.”

El Badrawy said he usually pays between LE 6 to LE 8 daily for the sayes parking. In return, he gets his car back with all sorts of scratches on it. The parking attendant always denies responsibility, he said.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.

The staff is quick and efficient as well as friendly. “They are very loyal to their customers and they customize their services to those customers,” said Fady Hebeish, a mass communication senior.

“I really like the atmosphere, the food and the service. [But] the place needs to be a little bit bigger,” said Laila Arafah, a political science junior.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.

The staff is quick and efficient as well as friendly. “They are very loyal to their customers and they customize their services to those customers,” said Fady Hebeish, a mass communication senior.

“I really like the atmosphere, the food and the service. [But] the place needs to be a little bit bigger,” said Laila Arafah, a political science junior.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.

The staff is quick and efficient as well as friendly. “They are very loyal to their customers and they customize their services to those customers,” said Fady Hebeish, a mass communication senior.

“I really like the atmosphere, the food and the service. [But] the place needs to be a little bit bigger,” said Laila Arafah, a political science junior.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.

The staff is quick and efficient as well as friendly. “They are very loyal to their customers and they customize their services to those customers,” said Fady Hebeish, a mass communication senior.

“I really like the atmosphere, the food and the service. [But] the place needs to be a little bit bigger,” said Laila Arafah, a political science junior.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.

The staff is quick and efficient as well as friendly. “They are very loyal to their customers and they customize their services to those customers,” said Fady Hebeish, a mass communication senior.

“I really like the atmosphere, the food and the service. [But] the place needs to be a little bit bigger,” said Laila Arafah, a political science junior.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.

The staff is quick and efficient as well as friendly. “They are very loyal to their customers and they customize their services to those customers,” said Fady Hebeish, a mass communication senior.

“I really like the atmosphere, the food and the service. [But] the place needs to be a little bit bigger,” said Laila Arafah, a political science junior.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.

The staff is quick and efficient as well as friendly. “They are very loyal to their customers and they customize their services to those customers,” said Fady Hebeish, a mass communication senior.

“I really like the atmosphere, the food and the service. [But] the place needs to be a little bit bigger,” said Laila Arafah, a political science junior.

For a good cup of coffee, a delicious brownie and a relaxing atmosphere, Retro has it all.

So push open that big wooden door...and go back to the Retro experience.
The school of sciences and engineering has recently announced that it will consider adding six new engineering programs, including an architecture major. This university can afford to open up opportunities to students who appreciate the added options, but it has also confused others. It is puzzling that the administration could consider setting up a new major, complete with added courses, new professors and extra equipment, when it seems to be falling short on so many other things.

Departments such as business administration and mass communication need to strive to enhance what the university already offers before we consider adding six new engineering programs, including an architecture major, gr.

An apology is clearly needed: that of Mr. El-Sallab to his student concerning his comment in library gate, because the security of people down the road and have as much fun as you can. Once you feel satisfied (without the help of daddy).

The kiosk stands against two walls of concrete and would have eventually burned out. Yet, it took 25 people, including a safety inspector, security officials, students, workers and people from the kitchen more than half an hour to get it out. Either we have no system, or the system we have doesn’t work.

I wonder what you think about this student’s explanation of what happened. We don’t want to hear things like we, ’Si khaw, ’an successif ly ‘tnut.’ We want the truth. We don’t want to kill anyone or remove any one from his job. We want to see people admitting to their mistakes and telling us how this will be avoided in the future.

Ferial J. Ghazoul
Professor of English and Comparative Literature

Towards accuracy on banned books

Hanan al-Shaykh was a distinguished visiting professor in the Department of English and Comparative Literature from Feb. 16-26, 2006. In an article in the Caravan dated Feb. 26, 2006 written by Raya Shehataf, entitled “Banned Novelist Speaks at AUC,” reference was made to her banned novels. I would like to inform your readers that none of the works of Hanan al-Shaykh is banned in Egypt. You can find all her works both in Arabic and translated in English on our site at the Diwan bookshop in Zamalek. The AUC bookshop does not sell her Arabic books but they did have all of Hanan al-Shaykh’s works in English until they sold out.

Fouad Hamoud Features Editor

It recently occurred to me after a few relationships that going through your college life being single and giving yourself the opportunity to figure yourself out is definitely the way to truly enjoy these years.

Granted, having a relationship is fun, but it’s a huge time commitment. Everyone wants to find someone living with a partner, but not for too long a time. Having short relationships where you get to know someone is always good because it gives you the opportunity to take that step (without the help of daddy) in the end, what you want in life and what makes you happy. Yet, through these experiences you do learn how to find that perfect hard commitment.

When you’re stuck in a serious commitment at an age where you should be experiencing life, you limit that experience and can later regret committing. After asking several friends what the best things about being single are, most answers included having nobody to have to respond to (and call at least 10 times a day for no reason), nobody to hold you back from doing your thing, and being able to know yourself better. After asking what the good things about being in a relationship that you can’t do when you’re single were, most people were stampeded, having no idea how to answer.

If you think about it, everything you think you gain when in a relationship can be done when you’re single, aside from having affective feelings towards another, which was all we need someone to talk to and be there at any time, that’s what friends are for. It’s having someone help you make decisions and encourage you. It’s not your friends or family, it is you, it is you. And finally, if it’s physical, it goes without saying: it’s pretty obvious how you can get around that one.

I’m not targeting this please to any specific gender or person, but rather for those who have tied themselves down and might be having second thoughts, or those who are considering committing just because it’s the new fad all the college kids are doing but don’t really know why.

I’m sure most of you believe your ongoing relationship will never end. Yet after seeing friends end engagements in a second over a slight disagreement, or a friend deciding two years into a long-term relationship they need a change, they are under the impression that that’s what starts all the fights. To start with, many of us don’t like to be played around with. They better not be around for a test drive, we sit at you and then return after you are bored.

Even though we respect the fact that you like to be in control 24/7, that’s not a sign of masculinity. Birthdays, anniversaries, Valentine’s and special events are days that we did not forget, but at the same time, be spontaneous and surprise us with wrapped gifts.

Play the “hard-to-get” game but don’t push it; everyone likes the chase but it’s been used too much and, honestly, it’s getting lame. This gets us to the whole “hard to get” attitude that you put on. We already know you are worth it and there is no reason to flatter. So instead, try to notice things about us such as our latest haircuts, how we make up and look at it. We want to hear these tiny compliments when we change the smallest thing about our appearance.

You might as well understand how we feel. Share with us your experiences and listen carefully. Being a player is not something that you should be proud of or something you should brag about. That’s so 2011. We don’t like airheads who are just interested in people who are either rich or with a good game.

If you think we are pushing for commitment, back up and tell us that you think we’re moving too fast instead of frustrating. Complaining, pumpering, spoiling, and caring for us are the four simple keys to get into our hearts.

Fouad Hamoud Features Editor

The voice

Yasmeen El Mallah, Editor-in-Chief
Yunan Gourley, Managing Editor
Heba El-Bedawy, Senior Editor
Sharakeh Nasir El-Din, Senior Editors
Ethar Shalaby, Senior Arabic Editor
Heba Hassabou and Nancy Heinen, English News Editors
Yamina Yousif, English Production Editors
Fouad Hamoud, Features Editor
Ethar Shalaby, Heba El-Bedawy, Pasmand El Hammami and Sherreen El Gazali, Copy Editors

Caravan Staff

Mona Ardian, Arabic News Editor
Anvar Nour, Arras El Naitah and Essam Bahran, Arabic Copy Editors

Hassan Hassan, Heba Abdelsattar, and Yasmine Yousif, English Production Editors
Hoda Mousa and Yasmin El Mallah, Arabic Production Editors
Omar Rehamed and Salma Mansour, Photographers
Alla El Moelem, Aysen El Hakea, Karim Higazy, Salma Mansour and Zeena Morad Cartoonists
Janet Key, English Advisor and Managing Director
Ammir Shawk, Arabic Advisor
Maire El Meligy, Secretary

To contact the Caravan, call 787-4743 or come by the newsroom (SS 623)

Letter Policy

The Caravan welcomes letters to the editor responding to published material or commenting on subjects that are of interest to the general community. Only e-mailed letters (caravan@aucegypt.edu) not exceeding 400 words will be accepted. All letters must be signed with the author’s name, ID number, major and year. Subject headings of e-mails must distinguish between emails that are personal comments to the newsroom and publishable letters to the editor.

We reserve the right to edit any submission to the Op-Ed section for libel, grammar, punctuation, clarity, and space. The Caravan is under no obligation to print all submitted letters.

Submit your letter by Sunday at 6 p.m.

Editorial Disclosure

The opinions, columns and cartoons printed in the Caravan do not necessarily reflect the positions of the students, faculty, staff, or administration of American University in Cairo (AUC).

Submit your corrections by Sunday at 6 a.m.

Correction Policy

The Caravan welcomes corrections for any of the content on our pages. E-mail corrections to caravan@aucegypt.edu.

3. When safety precautions are taken, people are trained and there is regular inspection of the equipment, then the solutions to any anticipated problem can be applied efficiently.

The Caravan: No obligation to print all pieces submitted.

 postal service major will consider adding six new engineering programs, including an architectural major, especially if it is placed in the middle of campus, is against all safety measures.

The fire hydrant that was closest to the site of the fire had a missing manual valve and the hose didn’t fit in the opening of the fire hydrant. The equipment has not been properly inspected.

The supervisor of the Wallace computer lab did not evacuate or close the lab.

There was nobody from the clinic present in case one of the students had suffered from suffocation because of the smoke.

The Caravan: No obligation to print all pieces submitted.

The fire that occurred on Sunday, Dec. 1 in the Greek campus was not only a disaster, but could have been avoided altogether. While working in a natural gas plant and am aware of the basic general and industrial safety techniques, I would like to point out the reasons for my claim:

1. The fire hydrant that was closest to the site of the fire had a missing manual valve and the hose didn’t fit in the opening of the fire hydrant. The equipment has not been properly inspected.

2. The fire hydrant that was closest to the site of the fire had a missing manual valve and the hose didn’t fit in the opening of the fire hydrant. The equipment has not been properly inspected.

3. The supervisor of the Wallace computer lab did not evacuate or close the lab.

Students and workers in the combing the fire were only endanger-
Solutions to the word search are posted on the Caravan Web site.

Word Search: For all the ladies

Angeline, Carolina, Jenny from the block, Mustang Sally
Angie, Daisy Duke, Laura, Oh Carol
Billie Jean, Denise, Layla, Peggy Sue
Black Betty, Hello Dolly, Lucille, Roxanne
Bonnie and Clyde, Iris, Maria, Ruby

Solutions to the word search are posted on the Caravan Web site.
لا يوجد نص يمكن قراءته بشكل طبيعي من الصورة المقدمة.
بدء أسبوع الصحة النفسية والبدنية في الجامعة

معرض التوظيف يحدد مجالات العمل للخليجيين

تعتبر مساحة المستشفى فيKPYك كأكبر مكتبة في المنطقة، حيث تضم أكثر من 100,000 كتاب وقائمة كبيرة من المجلات والمجلات المهنية. بالإضافة إلى ذلك، يمكن للمواطنينأتاد أن يتم تقديم النص الذي جاء في هذا المقال في العدد التوالي من المجلة.